

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A process for conveying solid particles of irregular geometry, preferably polygonal geometry, through a pipe system, where the solid particles are conveyed by a gas. In order to enable metering through fragments or other solid particles of irregular geometry in desired quantities without any risk of the particles becoming trapped in the pipe system and causing blockages, further solid particles of regular geometry are added to the solids particles of irregular geometry.